The many practical -- as well as moral reasons-- include:

It is more cost effective for Virginians in the short, mid and long term. It's better for the government as well as for families.

It is time to expand coverage to catch up to other states and countries and how they treat their citizens.... we want to be proud to be Virginians.

It protects all of us and our families -- untreated people can cause distress, illness and greater cost by coming to the emergency rooms.   Healthy people can contribute better to the economy and are more productive citizens.

In the mid and long term it will help reduce medical costs.

Thanks!

Kathy
