I would like to ask you not to expand Medicaid in Virginia. Studies have shown that those on Medicaid now are not getting the healthcare that should be expected, and that many Virginia doctors are no longer accepting Medicaid patients, since they can no longer afford to treat them because of all the regulations required, and the reduction of compensation for those services. For the sake of those currently on Medicaid, and for the sake of those who truly need it and will legitimately be able to receive it, I urge you, again, not to expand it. Virginians do not deserve the substandard healthcare that will result in further expansion, nor the additional expenses involved, that will affect all Virginians.
