Comment - In the end, expanding Medicaid to 400,000 Virginians isn't about numbers. It's about individual lives, individual families facing the hard challenges of life. Any one of us could be faced with a catastrophic incident in our lives that places us among those who need Medicaid. It says much about us, as a state, and as a nation, how we respond to those who find themselves in that place now. I personally do not want to be part of a society that turns it's back on the working poor. Please expand Medicaid.
