Comment - It won't cost Virginia anything for the first three years. After that Virginia will pay just a fraction of the cost to provide critical healthcare to seniors, kids and families across the state. If we don't expand Medicare (and it won't be for financial reasons) we ultimately will be hurting ourselves financially, and in much more serious ways, down the road. This will hurt business and drive a wedge among the citizens of the Commonwealth, to say nothing of degrading the quality of life for us all.
